LSFY 101-10 WISDOM IN ANCIENT THOUGHT - Fall Term 2015

DEKE GOULD

This course was one of my favorites this term. I loved the structure of the course, and the way the class was run in and out of class. The only thing I wish is that there were a few more reminders for the deadlines for the online submissions. I realize that college is different than high school, but maybe as a transitional course there could be a bit of help in that respect.

The course had quite a bit of influence from philosophy. Philosophy is not something that particularly interests me, however, Dr. Gould was always engaging, and I've really learned a lot from him—my writing has improved immensely!

This course had challenging, but beneficial material. The overall class was worth taking.

I really enjoyed how the required readings were connected with background information about Greek philosophers. This wasn't required for the course, but it gave me a better understanding of the required readings.

Overall this class was helpful, but the times when we got off-topic were not as useful, though very interesting. Maybe a little bit more at a balance, because the random things were still fun.

The thing I got most out of this class is my ability to reconstruct and analyze arguments now. I think this skill will really be useful for me. I did not like the Greek philosophy book we read in doing so. I would've liked a more interesting and engaging book.

I didn't want to take this class but overall it wasn't that bad. I enjoyed Dr. Deke but I didn't like how this class was a lot about philosophy.

Even though the weekly forums were in the syllabus, the students should be reminded to do them as I missed three without realizing it and many other missed many more.
